No valid extension

No reconstructed line chart was generated.

The Supplemental Graphics PDF cites Leetaru 2011 and says the series are plotted by month. The First Monday article and GDELT mirror identify the two source visuals: New York Times monthly tone, 1945-2005, and Summary of World Broadcasts monthly tone, January 1979-July 2010.

The underlying monthly numeric data file was not located in this pass. The mirrored Leetaru PNGs are retained as visual evidence only. The project rule forbids digitizing Pinker's plotted values or Leetaru's plotted PNGs as source data.

No book-period dataset means no defensible post-2010 extension.

Generated 2026-07-04. This is a blocker/status artifact, not a data reconstruction.

Sources: Meyer & Sullivan 2017. “Disposable income” refers to their “After-tax money income,” including credits, adjusted for inflation using the bias-corrected CPI-U-RS, and representing a family with two adults and two children. “Consumption” refers to data from the BLS Consumer Expenditure Survey on food, housing, vehicles, appliances, furnishings, clothing, jewelry, insurance, and other expenses. “Poverty” corresponds to the US Census definition for 1980, adjusted for inflation; anchoring the poverty line in other years would result in different absolute numbers but the same trends.
